Administrative Report for mid-December 2022 to mid-January 2023

Closings

Tiffany & Sally's first official duty, one day into being co-interim directors, was to coordinate with the Library Board to close the Library on 12/22 afternoon and all day 12/23 due to severe weather conditions. We created a checklist of procedures to be followed for future weather-related closures.

The library typically follows the City's holiday calendar, with the exception that the Library is open on MLK day and the City is closed. And typically when a holiday falls on MTW, the Library Board will permit the library to close at 6 pm instead of 8 pm. So Tiffany and Sally reached out to ask permission to close the library early (6 pm) on December 26 and January 2. In addition to being short-staffed by 2 position vacancies and 2 full time staff on vacation, we were one of the only community libraries open regular hours and the South Central Library System was also closed in observance of the holidays.

Tiffany and Sally thank the Board for your patience as we worked through a couple of atypical situations right from the get-go.

2023 Scheduled Library Closings

- Sunday, January 1
- Monday, May 29
- Tuesday, July 4
- Monday, September 4
- Thursday, November 23
- Friday, November 24
- Sunday, December 24
- Monday, December 25

Library Annual Report

Tiffany is gearing up for her first run at the Annual Report for 2022.

Staff

Circulation Supervisor Alice Johnson created a new staff blog. At other libraries she has worked at, Alice found it helpful to have a central hub for interdepartmental communication, announcements, and to archive procedures.

The hiring process for the 11 hour/week Library Assistant vacancy is complete, and we are pleased to have a new Library Assistant join our team already on January 11.

The Monona Library Director position is open until midnight on January 16.

Events

The Teen Lock-in was a tremendous success! 30 people ages 10-18 attended and were here from 5:30-8:30 jumping in the bouncy house, playing games on the Nintendo Switch, crafts, and playing communal games – all to the beats of Tiffany's playlist and strobing lights. It was a blast!

Loud in the Library planning is coming together. The theme this year is The Price is Right and we hope [INSERT YOUR NAME HERE] will C'mon Down! Monona Bank is our Loudest sponsor, followed by Chad's Design Build, with 14 other businesses sponsoring the event.

We had a successful seed packaging event. Seeds are available for patrons to help themselves. Currently, there are 50 packets in the basket.

Facility

The library processed facility expenses that put us over budget at the end of 2022:

Illingworth-Kilgust labor and materials to replace boiler pump ($3,059.68);

Paramount Roofing & Siding, LLC, siding installation on a small hexagon structure on top of the library with new vinyl siding ($2,850.00).

The new canopy lighting was installed on January 3 and it looks great. The light brightens the overhang and compliments the freshly painted parking lot columns.

The Problematic Pooper situation has not resolved as neatly as we had hoped. Former Director Claringbole spoke with the prime suspect on December 7 and we had not had further incident until December 27. Unfortunately, we have not been able to 'catch him in the act' so no further action has been taken.

Partnerships & Projects

Monona Library formed a partnership with Rachel Werner, Founder & Creative Director of the Little Book Project WI. Rachel will be designing a special Little Book publication that covers feedback from the Community Read on Anti Racism, as well as anti racism efforts in the Monona community. The project hopes to capture progress made and to acknowledge work yet to be done on diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging in our community.

Dr. Rebekah Willet reached out to Angelika and Tiffany to discuss a grant proposal with Dr. Peter Wardrip to study how to support children's play in Wisconsin-based public libraries and children's museums. This grant aims to 1) understand how children's museums and public libraries define and view play, 2) iteratively design levers for supporting play, and 3) identify ways of assessing play spaces and play-based programming. If successful, the grant would run from September 2023 for two years. The aim is to create a community of practice with professionals from 8 libraries and museums in Wisconsin. Participation would begin in September. Grant proposal info is due for iSchool researchers on January 20th.

Brandon Peterson, Public Health Madison & Dane County, contacted Tracy Herold, Dane County Library System, about setting up mobile vaccine clinics at libraries. Details provided by Peterson:

Teams usually consist of one Lead worker, 3-5 vaccinators, and then 2-3 admin workers. We bring all of our own supplies and vaccines, offering free COVID vaccines and boosters to anyone 6 months and older, and occasionally can bring some flu vaccine to provide as well.

We have Moderna, Pfizer, and some Novavax depending on inventory on hand. We only need indoor space to set up, some libraries have given us a separate room to work out of but we just need a few tables and chairs.

We provide flyers that you can hang up and send out to clients ahead of time in English and Spanish, potentially other languages if asked.

Please email me if you would like to learn more or try to schedule a clinic, our schedule is ever changing with availability depending on the week, BPeterson@publichealthmdc.com

We have held mobile clinics at Goodman South, Deforest, Sun Prairie, Lakeview, Meadowridge, Waunakee, and Stoughton libraries who have all been amazing partners!

We hope to have more mobile clinics in other libraries throughout Dane County as they have been an excellent resource to spread access for COVID vaccine to the local communities.

Monona Library now has United Way 211 brochures and cards that we can offer to patrons who are looking for community resources. United Way 211 provides 24/7 live, local help to persons in our community who need help finding food, paying rent, connecting to addiction treatment, and much more.

Mark Jochem, South Central Library System Workforce Development Consultant, reached out about the Social Work Intern Cohort project. This project is a partnership between SCLS, UW-Madison, and UW-Stevens Point to place social work students in libraries to provide social service assistance. Jochem reported that Monona Library did not get a placement this year since UW-Madison places interns in the Fall semester. Jochem put Monona Library on the email list for the next meeting in January.

Youth Services Report

December was a busy, yet very fun month for Youth Services. Angelika continues to have a strong presence at her programs. The number of times families come back to her programs demonstrates her ability to connect with family units and caregivers!

Library After Dark was a HIT and kids are still talking about the program! Not only was it well-attended, but it was an amazing chance to connect with tweens and teens and build relationships among Youth Services staff and other staff participants. Next year we plan to increase capacity.

Monona Library was invited by UW-Madison iSchool to be a part of a research project for play in libraries. We were contacted as a potential partner library due the play emphasis that already exists here, a passion of Angelika and Tiffany, and the specificity of the focus (which has been more revolutionary in libraries) is certainly paying off well!

Adult Services Report

- Creating & Making Together, kicked off this month with a great turnout. We're excited that this can be a great inter-department collaboration that offers intergenerational experiences for community members.
- The online author talks have been added to the library calendar. The lineup is full of best sellers and award winners, definitely worth a look. As this online program opportunity continues, we will experiment with marketing and find ways to engage the community.
- The program calendar continues to be filled through April. All programming staff are also pushing to have summer program dates set by mid-February, allowing Amy time to prep materials for outreach.
- Book displays continue to rotate on a regular basis. We work to offer a wide range of titles with each display. We include titles and authors that are well known, and always invest time into searching for items that are written by or offer own-voice perspectives from underrepresented people such as the BIPOC and/or LGBTQIA+ community.
- Jenna has been invited to participate in Research Institute for Public Libraries (RIPL) as a small group facilitator. RIPL is an immersive conference focused on practical methods for gathering, analyzing, and using data for planning, management, and communicating impact. The conference will be held in Madison in July. As a small group facilitator, registration is discounted. The friends have already agreed to support this professional development opportunity.
- During the Interim, Jenna is focused on filling in on circulations shifts when needed, and supporting Alice as she adjusts to her role.

Designing Opportunities for Play

Research Forward project proposal, Dr Peter Wardrip and Dr Rebekah Willett, UW-Madison

Four-year-olds today have spent more than half their lives under pandemic conditions. With outdoor and indoor play spaces closing or limited, opportunities for play during the pandemic have been reduced, much to the detriment of children (Rogers, 2022). While schools struggle to address children's pandemic-related needs, community organizations are eager to identify ways to support children and families in these unprecedented times. Play is one way to do this, given the different benefits of play including cognitive development, socialization, building resilience, and working through complex emotions (e.g., Gilliam, 2006, & Singer, 2012). One place where we can provide play experiences and support children's needs is through public libraries and children's museums (Sobel & Jipson, 2016). Libraries and museums see their role of supporting play to be fundamental to their mission as an educational environment for families (Luke et al, 2017).

While play has been heavily theorized in relation to children's cognitive development, and preschools are accustomed to designing for play, community organizations such as museums and libraries are newer proponents of play. They often see play in different ways than discussed in the context of schools. These different viewpoints support theories of play that analyze play as both complex and ambiguous (Eberle, 2014). Importantly, how we define and understand play can inform how we create the conditions for it to happen. Often, those definitions and understandings are linked to local features of the environment, e.g. an organization's mission, the experience of adults, or the culture of the local community.

Working with 8-10 Wisconsin public libraries and children's museums, this project aims to 1) understand how museums define and view play, 2) iteratively design levers for supporting play, and 3) identify ways of assessing play spaces and play-based programming. The project aims to develop a community of practice with practitioners around children's play.

If successful, the grant will run from September 2023 for two years. Over the two years, practitioners will

1. Participate in bi-monthly meetings and design activities with researchers and peer library/museum partners (8-10 meetings total).
2. Participate in quarterly professional development meetings with a childhood development expert and other peer library/museum partners (4 total).
3. Host bi-annual or quarterly site visits to your library to observe play-based programming and spaces (2-4 total).

We will create practitioner-based tools that can be used to: a) understand and articulate institutional goals related to play, b) assess the design of play materials and interactions, and c) design data-led assessment for their play-based programming spaces. These tools will indicate to funders the applicability of the research as well as ways our work might be replicated in a variety of settings across the country. This project will provide foundational work for future grant submissions, potentially from a variety of sources, including federal government agencies, non-government organizations, and industry.
